Now that's what I call a hero...

She's everywoman

- This is where to include a brief but essential biography of our hero.
- Clear information is best and gives the audience an overall sense of who this person is.
- Give a general sense of this person's place in the world.
- Include any part of her story that might help later in describing her as a hero.

Criterion #1

Our hero helps make the world a better place.

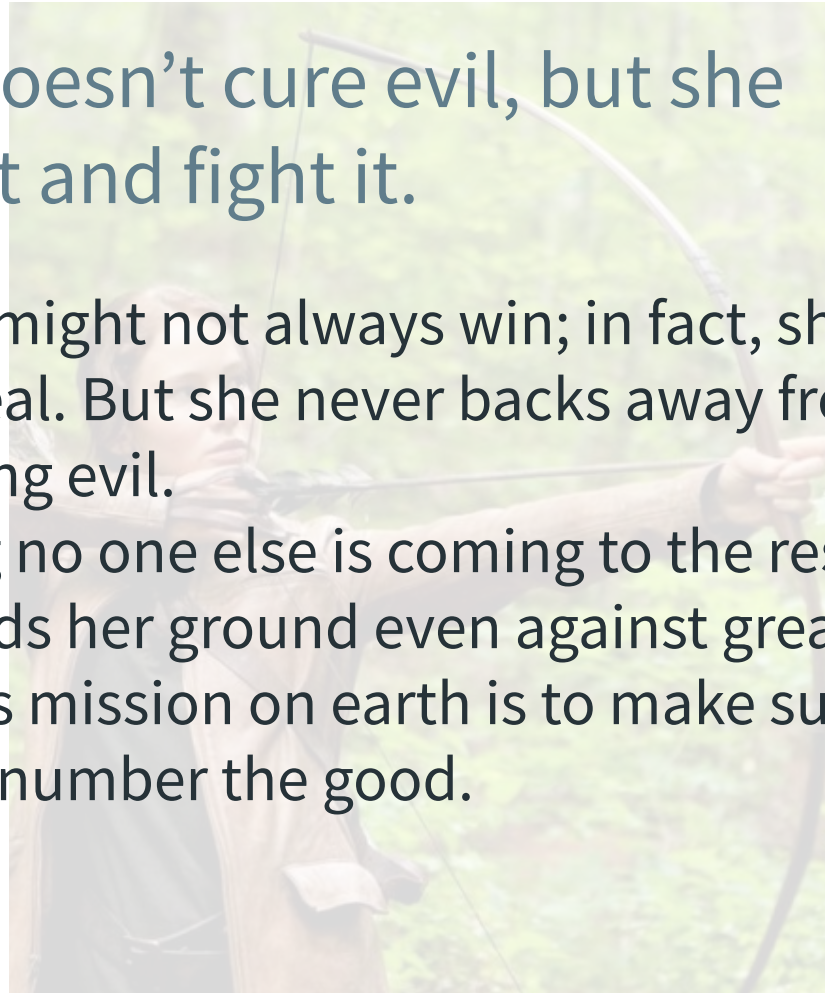

- ★ Like any good hero, she has something special that she shares with everyone.
- ★ Our hero brings light and hope to even the darkest parts of the world.
- ★ Nobody can solve every problem, but our hero leaves the world a more positive place than when she arrived.

Criterion #2

Our hero doesn't cure evil, but she does face it and fight it.

- ★ Our hero might not always win; in fact, she might lose a great deal. But she never backs away from confronting evil.
- ★ Assuming no one else is coming to the rescue, our hero stands her ground even against great odds.
- ★ Our hero's mission on earth is to make sure the bad never outnumber the good.

Criterion #3

Our hero is a role model despite never seeking credit for her actions.

- ★ Humility is the key to our hero leaving an authentic and life-long legacy.
- ★ Our hero faces great odds and risks losing everything—that doesn't matter as much as the search for justice does.
- ★ Our hero isn't a hero because she succeeds, but because she faces defeat with dignity.

Where did our hero's journey take her?

The journey to becoming a

Call to Adventure

Where our hero hears the sound of a voice that insists she can be more than she believed. Our hero isn't born a hero, but she steps up pretty fast, and she faces her first challenges.

Crossing the Threshold

Where our hero opens the first door to adventure and wonder. Much darkness awaits, but some friends help along the way, and some light breaks through the darkness. The first of many steps on the path.

Return with Elixir

Where our hero finds the courage to return to the world with a gift after much sacrifice, danger and courage. She isn't the same person, and the world will benefit from her new gifts.

A Lasting Legacy

The Dalai Lama once said, “A true hero is one who conquers her own anger and hatred.”

This is what our hero has left for us to learn: humility, courage in the face of certain defeat, and the power to be ourselves. That is her gift and it is up to us to fulfil that promise.

She is timeless.

She is every one of us.

Thank you.
